

ANTHONY Delaney has been named partner in the family-run legal practice Delaney's Lawyers.

The third-generation boutique firm, established by Jack Delaney in 1944, has been headed by Anthony's elder brother Tim, who took over from their father Greg eight years ago.

"My father and I are very proud of what Anthony has achieved for the firm since his appointment in 2000," said Tim Delaney.

"He is well regarded as one of the Gold Coast's finest litigation lawyers, so it's only fair that he now gains further recognition as partner.

"Dad didn't make it easy for me to take over the family business, and I certainly wasn't going to make it an easy feat for Anthony."

The firm, located in Bundall, has experience in high-volume conveyancing, and specialises in property law and development, personal injuries, commercial litigation, and finance and banking.

LUISA Slack-Smith has joined the Links Hope Island sales team as business development manager to assist in driving the club's equity membership levels.

In her new role, Mrs Slack-Smith will focus on developing and co-ordinating sales strategies and maximising sales leads within the business sector.

She has a broad knowledge of sales and marketing after working for property developer Stockland.

"I also aim to build strong networks and develop strategic alliances with corporate companies to create more opportunities for Links shareholders," she said.

The Links course is owned by L2 Capital, a company associated with Consolidated Properties boss Don O'Rorke and his father-in-law, John Thomas.

Under L2's control, the club is selling club memberships to the public after an initial take-up by Hope Island Resort residents.
